HOW TO CURE CONSUMPTION.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF DR. SCHENCK'S GREAT MEDICINES.—Will people never learn to know that a diseased liver and stomach necessarily disease the entire system? The plainest principles of common sense teach this and yet there are hundreds who ridicule the idea, and continue in the course which almost inevitably brings them prematurely to the grave. Living as the majority of the people do, at complete variance with the laws of nature, it must be apparent to all that, sooner or later, nature will revenge herself. Hence we find that persons who indulge to excess in the use of very rich or indigestible food or intoxicating drinks, invariably pay a heavy penalty in the end. The stomach becomes disordered and refuses to act: the liver fails to perform its functions, dyspepsia and its attendant evils follow, and still the suffering individuals persist in clinging to the thoroughly exploded idea of the past. Dr. SCHENK'S medicines are recommended to all such. They bring sure and certain relief wherever they are used as directed, and all that is necessary to establish their reputation with every ailing man or woman in the lands a fair and impartial trial of them. Let those who are skeptical on this point, and who have permitted interested persons to prejudice them against these now celebrated remedies for consumption, discard their prejudices, and be governed by the principles of reason and common sense. If the system is disordered depend upon it, in nine cases out of ten the seat of the disorder will be found in the stomach and liver. To cleanse and invigorate the stomach and to stimulate the liver to healthy action, use

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS.—The daily increasing demand for these pills in the best evidence of their value. Thousands upon thousands of boxes are sold daily. Why? Simply because they act promptly and efficiently Invalids who may not find it convenient to call on Dr. SCHENCK in person are informed that full and complete directions for use accompany each package of the MANDRAKE PILLS, PULMONIC SYRUP AND SEAWEED TONIC.—These medicines will cure consumption unless the lungs are so far gone that the patient is entirely beyond the reach of medical relief.

It may be asked by those who are not familiar with the virtues of these great remedies, "How do Dr. Schenck's medicines effect their wonderful cures of consumption?"

The answer is a simple one. They begin their work of restoration by bringing the stomach, liver and bowels into an active healthy condition. It is food that cures this formidable disease. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS act on the liver and stomach, promoting healthy secretion, and removing the bile and slime which have resulted from the inactive or torpid condition of those organs, and of the system generally. This sluggish state of the body, and the consequent accumulation of the unhealthy substances named prevent the proper digestion of food, and, as a natural consequence creates disease, which results in prostration and finally in death.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP and SEAWEED TONIC, when taken regularly, mingle with the food, and the digestive organs, make good and rich blood, and as a natural consequence, give flesh and strength to the patient. Let the faculty say what it may, this is the only true cure for consumption. Experience has proved beyond the shadow of a doubt, and thousands are to-day alive and well who a few years since were regarded as hopeless cases, but who were induced to try Dr. SCHENCK'S remedies, and were restored to permanent health by their use.

One of the first steps the physician should take with a consumptive patient is to invigorate the system. Now how is this to be done? Certainly not by giving medicines that exhaust and enervate—medicines that impair instead of improve the functions of the digestive organs Doctor SCHENCK'S medicines cleanse the stomach and bowels of all substances which are calculated to irritate or weaken them. They create an appetite—promote healthful digestion—make good blood, and, as a consequence, they invigorate and strengthen the entire system and more especially those parts which are diseased If this cannot be done, then the case must be regarded as a hopeless one.

If the physician finds it impossible to make a patient feel hungry, if the deceased person cannot partake of good nourishing food and properly digest it, it is impossible that he can gain in flesh and strength; and it is equally impossible to bring a patient to this condition so long as the liver is burdened with diseased bile, and the stomach laden with unhealthy slime.

Almost the first request made to the physician by a consumptive patient is that he will prescribe medicines that will allay the cough, night sweats and chills, which are the sure attendants on consumption. But this should not be done, as the cough is only an effort of nature to relieve itself, and the night sweats and chills are caused by the diseased lungs. The remedies ordinarily prescribed do more harm than good. They impair the functions of the stomach, impede healthy digestion, and aggravate rather than cure the disease.

There is, after all, nothing like facts which to substantiate a position, and it is upon facts that Dr. Schenck's relies. Nearly all who have taken his medicines in accordance with his directions have not only been cured of consumption, but, from the fact that these medicines act with wonderful power upon the digestive organs, patients thus cured speedily gain flesh. Cleansing the system of all impurities, they lay the foundation for a solid, substantial structure. Restoring these organs to health, they create an appetite. The food is properly assimilated the quantity of blood is not only increased, but is made rich and strong and in the face of such a condition of the system all disease must be banished.

Full directions accompany each of the medicines, so that it is not absolutely necessary that patients should see Dr SCHENCK personally, unless they desire to have their lungs examined. For this purpose he is at his office, No 15 North Sixth St., corner of Commerce, Phila., every Saturday, from 9 A. M. until 1 P. M.

Advice is given without charge, but for a thorough examination with the Respirometer the charge is $5.

HUNTINGDON, PA.

A WARNING AT THE BRIDGE.

In the year 1861, I was superintendent of the Howrick and Rocky River Railroad. It was a line that did a good run of business, connecting as it did a great city with a flourishing back country, and we run a pretty good number of trains over the rails in the course of twenty-four hours. The daily trains were every hour, but after nine in the evening there was only one train until the steamboat accommodation of half past three in the morning.

This intervening train was the Belport mail. It was made up at Belport and ran as far as Clifton, express all the way. Belport was the large city of which I have spoken, and it was there my office was located for the business of the road was all settled and arranged at that end of the line. Of course I give fictitious names, and the reader may not expect to find Belport on the railway map.

The 12:30 train, or midnight mail, as it was more frequently designated, was run by Earl Rogers, a young man of seven or eight and twenty, who had been employed on the road for several years. He was the best engine driver on the corporation, and for that reason he had been elected for that train, because there was a better lookout required by night.

Earl taken all in all, was one of the finest fellows I ever saw. Frank, handsome, generous to a fault, and very well educated. He had fallen into the vocation of an engineer more for his love of excitement and danger than anything else, perhaps, and if there was any particularly perilous business to be done, Earl Rodgers was our man.

For some time he had been desperately in love with Laura Demain, the daughter of a rich old fellow, just on the other side of the Rocky river, a half a dozen miles beyond Belport.

This love was fully returned, for Laura was a noble-hearted girl and did not care for wealth and ambition when weighed in the balance with love; but old Demain and she were two, and there was no probability of him ever giving his consent. He had set his heart on her marrying Prince Carleton, a young blood of the vicinity, reputed wealthy, and of an old family.

Demain's opposition naturally made the lovers more determined, and they only waited an increase of Earl's salary to be married in spite of papa Demain. Earl was a faithful fellow and I was doing the best with the company to get an advance for him, with every probability of success.

Somehow, I took a strong interest in Earl's love affairs. I am an old codger, and love matters are rather out of my line, my forte being the calculating of accounts, the regulation of freight rates, and the management of business so as to secure the fattest dividends to the stockholders.

Perhaps my interest in Earl's love for Laura might be because I most cordially detested Prince Carleton. He was always "blowing" our road, finding fault with the rate of speed, with the grade, with the ventilation, with everything in short, for nothing suited him. Then upon one occasion he and I had a few words neither very pleasant nor very choice, and he had called me an old scoundrel, and I returned the compliment with interest. After that we were worse friends than ever.

One dark rainy night in November, just after the nine o'clock train had been got off, and I was sitting in my office trying to balance an account that would not balance, the door opened and Earl Rodgers walked in. He had on his waterproof suit the hood over his head, and the collar buttoned closely, but I saw that his face was very pale and his eyes gleamed with unnatural fire

"What in the world has happened, Rodgers?" said I. "You look as glum as if you were going to your own funeral."

"Mr. Woodbury," said he earnestly, "do you believe in presentiments?"

"No," said I, "I certainly do not; they are old woman's whims!"

"Perhaps so. I wish I could think so,' said he sadly, "I have been trying hard to."

"What is it, Earl? Anything gone wrong with Laura?" for I did not know but the little jade had been playing off with him after the manner of woman.

"You will laugh at me, Mr. Woodbury, but I must tell somebody, or I will go out of my wits," said he half-laughing, "and before heaven I tell you it is all truth. Thursday afternoon I took a hand car and went over to Rocky River Bridge. I do not mind confessing that I went on purpose to get a glimpse at her home—perhaps of herself. I stood at one end of the bridge, looking across at the house, enraptured at the sight of a scarlet shawl which I knew was hers flitting in and out through the shrubbery of the garden.

"And while I was looking at her I heard footsteps, and glancing up I saw myself coming up from the opposite side of the bridge! I was dressed in this suit of waterproof, my face was as pale as death, and my wide open eyes were blank and expressionless!

"Sir, you think I am dazed, but I'm telling you only the truth! While I stood staring at the vision it disappeared, and weak and trembling I came back to town. By the next day—yesterday, I had reasoned myself out of belief in anything of the kind. It was a hallucination, I said, and to prove it so, I would go out there again and see if it would appear for the second time. I went out again yesterday and, sir, the same thing was repeated! It will come once more, and then I shall go to my death!"

"Nonsense!" said I. "Come Earl, be honest, and confess that you had been taking too much whisky."

"I never drink anything as you know Mr. Woodbury," returned he, "and this thing was fearfully real. If I run the mail to-night I shall be killed, and heaven knows what will be the fate of the train! I suppose it could not be taken off to-night."

"Taken off? What in the deuce do you mean?" snapped I, "this road runs trains as advertised! Cowardly engineers to the contrary notwithstanding

He looked at me sadly, reproachfully—and I could have kicked myself for the way I had spoken to him.

"It was not on my own account, sir, said he, "but it is only a few days before Thanksgiving, and the train will be a full one. If there is an accident it may be a bad one."

"Accident!" said I contemptuously, "fiddlesticks. Come in to-morrow and let us laugh at you."

He bid me good-night gravely and went out.

Presently the clock struck twelve, and I heard three sharp successive whistles that told me that the train was nearly ready. A strange feeling of apprehension seized me. What if anything should happen?

Yielding to an impulse that would not be controlled, I threw on my overcoat, turned out the gas, locked the office and hurried over to the depot just in season to catch the tail of the rear car and swing myself on board.

Earl Rodgers stood at his post, pale and silent, yet altered and watchful. By the head light on the locomotive he could see the track for half a mile ahead, and his keen eye scanned every inch of the way as the train swept on.

Past Roman station—past the Mill Cut—past Hill's embankment, and they plunged into the narrow belt of woods which skirted Rocky River.

Suddenly, as they swept around the curve, Earl's cheek whitened and he drew his breath quick and hard!

What he saw before the train, warned him that only death and destruction lay ahead. He could probably save himself by leaping off, but that would doom all on board. Not a second did he hesitate. The sharp whistle down breaks sounded. He reversed steam and did everything in his power to stop the train.

When he saw that his efforts were in vain, that the obstacle which lay across the track only a few rods in advance could not be avoided, he sprang over the wood-box and unlocked from the carriages; the engine released from the drag, shot ahead, and the next instant plunged into the gulf.

There was a crash, a succession of shrill whistles from the escaping steam and then all was still.

Not one of the carriages went down; the first one halted on the very brink of the abyss as if to impress more fearfully upon the minds of the passengers the terrible danger they had escaped. Before the train had come to a stop, I had jumped out and was flying forward looking for Earl Rodgers.

They pointed into the river in answer, to my inquiries, and seizing a lantern from the hand of one of the brakesmen, I soon climbed down the embankment and found him. He lay under a wreck of the locomotive, pale and bloody, with no breath coming from his lips.

The two stokers were a little way off, stone dead.

I am an old man, but I didn't feel the weight of that poor fellow as I carried him up the bank, and on to the house of Demain, which happened to be the nearest residence.

Of course old Demain could not refuse admittance under the circumstances, and in five minutes Laura was with me trying to restore the lifeless man to consciousness.

She was all courage and hope; but for her, we should have given him up for dead; and I to this day firmly believe that her presence and her care brought him back from death.

She never flinched while the surgeon amputated his leg at the knee, it was the only way to save him. Doctor Green said that Laura held the poor head of her patient to her bosom, and his hands in hers, through the whole operation.

The accident it was found had been occasioned by a stick of timber across the track, and the railroad company offered a reward of a thousand dollars for the discovery of the rascally perpetrator. No matter how we found it out, but it was ascertained beyond a doubt that Prince Carleton was the guilty party. He confessed it when we had him snug and safe, and said that he wanted Earl Rodgers out of the way, and because he hated the whole concern—meaning the railroad and the corporation, he had formed this plan of diabolical revenge.

His father was a millionaire, and bought up our silence handsomely.

Prince went to California, and I do not know what became of him.

Old Demain proved himself a trump after all, and gave in gracefully.

He is dead now, and Earl and Laura live at the old place, as happy a couple as ever you saw. As for Earl's warning, you may believe what you like about it. I have no explanation to offer.

Mark Twain at the Reception.

After I had drifted in the White House with the flood tide of humanity that had been washing steadily up the street for an hour, I obeyed the orders of the soldier at the door and the policeman within, and banked my umbrella with a colored man, who gave me a piece of brass with a number on it, and said that thing would produce the property at any time of the night. I doubted it, but I was on unknown ground now, and must be content to take a good many chances.

Another person told me to drop in with the crowd and I would come to the President presently. I joined, and we drifted along till we passed a certain point, and then we thinned out to double and single file. It was a right gay scene, and a right stirring and lively one; for the whole place was brightly lighted, and all down the great hall as far as one could see was a restless and writhing multitude of people, the women powdered, painted, jeweled and splendidly upholstered, and many of the men glided with the insignia of great naval, military and ambassadorial rank. It was bewildering.

Our long line kept drifting along, and by and by we came in sight of the President and Mrs. Grant. They were standing up shaking hands and trading civilities with our procession. I grew somewhat at home little by little, and then began to feel satisfied and contented. I was getting to be perfectly alive with interest by the time it came my turn to talk with the President.—I took him by the hand and looked him in the eye and said:

"Well, I reckon I see you at last, general. I have said as much as a thousand times, out in Nevada, that if ever I went home to the States I would just have the private satisfaction of going and saying to you by word of mouth that I thought you considerable of a soldier anyway. Now you know out there we——"

I turned round and said to the fellow behind me:

"Now look here, my good friend, how the nation do you suppose I can talk with any satisfaction with you crowding me this way? I am surprised at your manners."

He was a modest looking creature. He said:

"But you see the whole procession's stopped, and they're crowding up on me."

"Some people have got more cheek. Just suggest to the parties behind you to have some respect for the place they are in, and not try to shove in on a private conversation. What the General and me are talking about isn't of the least interest to them."

Then I resumed to the President:

"Well, well, well. Now this is fine. This is what I call something like.—Gay? Well, I should say so. And so this is what you call a Presidential reception. I'm free to say that it just lays over anything that ever I saw out in the sagebrush. I have been to Gov. Nye's Injun receptions at Honey Lake and Carson City, many and many a time—he that's Senator Nye now—you know him of course. I never saw a man in all my life that Jim Nye didn't know—and not only that, but he could tell him where he knew him, and all about him, family included, even if it was forty years ago. Most remarkable man, Jim Nye—remarkable. He can tell a lie with that purity of accent and that grace of utterance, and that convincing emotion—"

I turned again and said:

"My friend, your conduct surprises me. I have came over three thousand miles to have a word with the President of the United States upon subjects with which you are not even remotely connected, and by the living geowhilikens I can't proceed with any sort of satisfaction on account of your cussed crowding. Will you please to go a little slow now and not attract so much attention by your strange conduct? If you had any eyes you could see how the bystanders are staring."

He said:

"But I tell you, sir, it's the people behind. They are just growling and surging and shoving and I wish I was in Jericho, I do."

"I said:

"I wish you was, myself. You might learn some delicacy of feeling in that ancient seat of civilization, may be.—Drat if you don't need it."

And then I resumed to the President

"Yes, sir, I've been at receptions before, plenty of them—old Nye's Injun receptions. But they warn't as starchy as this by considerable. No great long strings highfliers like these galoots here, you know, but old high-flavored Washoes and Pi Utes, each one of them as powerful as a rag factory on fire. Phew! Those were halcyon days. Yes, indeed, General, and madam, many and many's the time out in the wilds of Nevada, I've been—"

"Perhaps you had better discontinue your remarks till another time, sir, as the people behind you are growing somewhat impatient," the President said.

"Do you hear that?" I said to the fellow behind me. "I suppose you will take that hint, anyhow. I tell you he is milder than I would be. If I was President, I would waltz you people out at the back door if you came crowding a gentleman this way, that I was holding a private conversation with."

Then I resumed with the President.

"I think that hint of yours will start them. I never saw people act so. It is really about all I can do to hold my ground with the mob shoving behind. But don't you worry on my account, General—don't give yourself any uneasiness about me—I can stand it as long as they can. I've been through this kind of a mill before. Why, as I was saying to you, many and many a time out in the wilds of Nevada, I was at Governor Nye's Injun receptions—and between me and you and that old man was a good deal of a Governor, take him all around. I don't know what for Senator he makes, though I think you'll admit that him and Bill Stewart and Tom Fitch take a bigger average of brains into that capitol up yonder, by a hundred and fifty fold, than any other State in America according to the population. And if you could just have been at one of old Gov. Nye's Injun receptions, and seen them savages—not highfliers like these, you know, but frowsy old bummers with nothing in the world on, in Summer time, but an old battered plug hat and a pair of spectacles—I tell you it was a swell affair, was one of Gov. Nye's early day receptions. Many and many's the time I have been to them, and seen him stand up and beam and smile on his children, as he called them in his motherly way—beam on them by the hour out of his handsome face, and comfort them with his persuasive tongue—seen him stand up there, and tell them anecdotes and lies, and quote Watt's hymns to them until he just took all the war spirit out of them—and grim chiefs that came two hundred miles to tax the whites with whole wagon loads of blankets and things or make eternal war if they didn't get them, he has sent away bewildered with his inspired mendacity and perfectly satisfied and enriched with an old hoopskirt or two, a lot of Patent Office reports, and a few sides of condemned army bacon that they would have to chain up to a tree when they camped or the skippers would walk off with them. I tell you he is a rattling talker. He—"

I wheeled and said:

"My friend, your conduct grieves me to the heart. A dozen times at least your unseemly crowding has seriously interfered with the conversation I am holding with the President, and if the thing occurs again, I shall take my hat and leave the premises."

"I wish to the mischief you would? Where did you come from anyway, that you've got the unutterable cheek to spread yourself here and keep fifteen hundred people standing waiting half an hour to shake hands with the President?"

An officer touched me on the shoulder and said:

"Move along, please; you're annoying the President beyond all patience. You have blocked the procession, and the people behind you are getting furious Come, move along, please."

Rather than have trouble, I moved along. So I had no time to do more than look back over my shoulder and say: "I do reckon Jim Nye is the bandiest creature about making the most of his chances that ever found an all-sufficient substitute for mother's milk in politics and sin. Now that is the kind of man old Nye is; and in less than two months he would talk every——. But I can't make you hear the rest, General, without hollering too loud."

☞ The counterfeiters have been baffled by the peculiar red and blue fiber of the new postal currency. The attempt was made by lithographic imitations of the fiber in pale red and blue, passing each sheet through separate impressions; but the color did not show through, and as the colored fiber runs all through the paper, the detection was easy.

☞ One of the census-takers asked an old gentleman what the given name of his wife was. He stammered a little, and finally answered—"I declare! I have called her mother so long that I have forgotten her name.' He finally hunted it up.

☞ The richer a man makes his food, the poorer he makes his appetite.

A Headless Horseman—How he rode at Wœrth.

At the battle of Wœrth, it is said that at the third charge of the cuirassiers, a horse was to be seen going at full speed with a headless rider. The mutilated corpse was that of M. de la Futzum de Lacarre, colonel of the third regiment of French cuirassiers, who had been decapitated by a cannon ball. Most people on reading this would declare that it was a mere sensation paragraph, totally devoid of truth. Such an occurrence, however, would not, by any means seem to be an impossibility. Not long ago we directed our readers' attention to an interesting article published by Dr. Brinton, surgeon to the Philadelphia Hospital, on the instantaneous rigidity which forms the occasional accompaniment of sudden and violent death, such as results from wounds of the head and heart. The startling phenomenon sometimes seen on the battle field, of the retention in death of the last attitude in life, has not escaped the observation of military surgeons, although the facts connected therewith have not been studied with the attention that they deserve. Those who are familiar with the descriptions that were given of the Crimean battle fields, particularly that of Inkerman, will remember that the various attitudes and the expression of the features of the dead were dwelt upon.—The report of M. Chenue contains a short account, chiefly based upon the communications of M. M. Armand and Perier of the attitudes of the dead in battle during the Crimean and Italian campaigns. At Magenta a Hungarian hussar, killed at the same time as his horse, remained almost in the saddle, resting on his right side, the point of his sabre carried forward, as at the charge. This rigidity generally follows sudden and violent deaths, but not invariably. Dr. Brinton, among his cases, gives one of a very striking kind. He says that a man wounded in the left breast at Belmont, Missouri, found a stray mule, which he succeeded in mounting. While in the act of riding the animal he died; but his corpse retained the upright mounted position and on its becoming necessary to appropriate the mule to the use of a living wounded soldier the body was found to be so firmly and rigidly set as to require a certain amount of positive force to free the mule from the clasps of his legs. Brinton is led to conclude, from his own observations and those of others, that this battle-field rigidity is developed at the moment of death, and that the cadaveric attitudes are those of the last moment and act of life.—London Lancet

THE SECRET.—"Mother," said a child of ten years of age, "I want to know the secret of your going away alone every night and morning?"

"Why, my child?"

"Because it must be to see some one you love very much."

"Well, suppose I do go to see a friend I love very much, and after seeing Him and conversing with Him I am more happy than before, why should you wish to know everything about it?"

"Because I wish to do as you do, that I may be happy too?"

"Well, my child, when I leave you in the morning and in the evening it is to commune with my Savior; I go to ask Him for His grace to make me holy and happy. I ask Him to assist me in the duties of the day, and especially to keep me from committing any sin against Him; and above all I ask Him to have mercy on you, and save you from the miseries of those who sin against Him"

"Oh that is the secret!" said the child; "then I must go with you."

SOMETIME.—It is a sweet, sweet song warbled to and fro among the topmost boughs of the heart, and filling the whole air with such joy and gladness as the songs of the birds do when the summer morning comes out of darkness and day is born on the mountains. We have all our possessions in the future which we call "sometime." Beautiful flowers and singing birds are there, only our hands seldom grasp the one, or our ears hear the other. But, oh, reader, be of good cheer, for all the good there is a golden 'sometime;" when the hills and valleys of time are all passed; when the wear and fever, the disappointment and sorrow of life are over, then there is the place and rest appointed of God. Oh, homestead, over whose roof fall no shadows or even clouds; and over whose threshold the voice of sorrow is never heard; built upon the eternal hills, and standing with thy spires and pinnacles of celestial beauty among the palm trees of the city on high, those who love God shall rest under thy shadows, where there is no more sorrow nor pain, nor the sound of weeping, "sometime."—Prentice

3. If it is a mixed assembly of ladies, one or more on each side, they may have it out among themselves—while we hold the bonnets.

Tuesday morning, Nov. 1, 1870.

WM. LEWIS, HUGH LINDSAY, } EDITORS.

The "Globe" has the largest number of readers of any other paper published in the county. Advertisers should remember this.

☞ Ohio sends the same number of Republican Congressmen to the next Congress that it has in the present, and on the State ticket the Republican majority is more than double what it was in 1869. How about the "reaction" there.

☞ According to the official figures of the recent census Huntingdon has now 31,252 of a population against 28,100 in 1860—an increase of 3,162. We have not the full census of each township, but we think it will not be withheld from the public much longer.

☞ Huntingdon has now a United States Senator, a Congressman and a State Senator. Bully for "ye ancient borough!"—Juniata Republican.

Thank you. Huntingdon was left out in the cold so long, that it is well enough she now has justice.

☞ It does make us feel good to read the Guerrilla Republican. The clan were much disappointed at the defeat of Mr. Morrell—we were not, because we knew there was too much manhood existing in the Republican party to permit Cremer & Co. to be politically happy after they helped the Democrats to crush a good Republican ticket last year. Their grunting and growling is music to our ears.

STRANGE.—We receive news from the war that a certain General is dead, but further information fails to corroborate the report. The last General placed in a coffin was General Von Moltke, but now it is said he is not dead but has celebrated his seventieth birthday, and received the congratulation of King William, Bismarck and others. We are glad he is alive, but don't enough privates get killed, and officers, too, without killing them with pen and ink?

☞ Last week a delegation of New York Democrats went to Washington to interview the President and protest against his action in sending troops to that city to be present at the coming election. The President told them he was only anxious to carry out the laws of Congress, and that would have to be done if all the troops in the service had to be sent to New York. No legal voter had anything to fear from the presence of troops.

☞ In New York city there is alone presented in this country the spectacle of a personal government as despotic and tyrannical as that of the late Emperor Napoleon of France. A few bold and unscrupulous men there, through a magnificently organized political machinery, annually re-elect themselves to place, disbursing the moneys and controlling the interests of a great city at their own will and pleasure.

☞ New York will hold a State election on the 8th of November.—President Grant has ordered General Sherman to send a large force of troops there, who will be at the command of the United States Marshal. This disposition is made for the purpose of preserving the peace, and preventing fraudulent voting. The only ones that are frightened are some of the Democrats, who have been guilty of "repeating" at former elections. We hope now to hear what is the actual Democratic majority in that city.

STATE FINANCES.—The last report of the Sinking Fund Commissioners of this State shows that during September $109,050 00 of the bonds of the State were redeemed and paid, and that since the 30th of November last, the whole amount redeemed by the State is $1,576,151 68. Since November 30, 1864, a Republican administration has paid the handsome sum of $8,141,214 67. The State debt Nov. 30, 1864, was $39,379,603 94, and Nov. 30, 1870, it will be $31,238,389 27.

COLORED CONSTABLE.—The Democratic township of East Vincent, Chester County, elected William Johnson, a colored man, constaple at the late election. The Village "Record" says: "We must confess that we had hardly expected to record the election of the first colored man in Chester county, under the workings of the Fifteenth Amendment, in a township that rolls up a Democratic majority of forty-six on a total vote of two hundred and six. The Democrats voted for Johnson out of spite, but they probably never made a better choice."

CONGRESS.—The return judges of the several counties comprising this congressional district, met at Hollidaysburg, on the 18th ult., and after presenting the official returns from each county declared the following as the result, and gave to Mr. Speer the certificate in such case provided for:

	Speer.	Morrell.

☞ The Chinese have destroyed the Catholic buildings at Peking, and still their government does nothing.

REVISION OF THE CONSTITUTION.—A meeting was recently held by the Union League of Philadelphia to consider the proposition of calling a convention to revise the Constitution of the State. Hon. Chas. Gibbons offered the following resolutions, the preamble to which sets forth that as all power is inherent in the people, and they have at all times an indefeasible right to alter or reform their government as they may think proper;

And whereas, The history of the legislation of Pennsylvania is strongly marked by the corruptive power of corporations, seeking special favors by the temptations of bribery; the franchises of the State are bartered for money, and our Legislative halls have often been converted into market places where important public offices have been sold to the highest bidders by faithless and venal public servants; vested rights have been threatened and assailed for the sole purpose of extorting ransom from their lawful proprietors, and public acts, which concern the common welfare, are passed or rejected without intelligent consideration, and thus the safety and happiness of the people are frequently imperiled by dishonest and incompetent representatives.

And whereas, There appears to be no other remedy for these monstrous and acknowledged evils than such well-considered amendments of the constitution of the State as will deliver the Legislative body from the temptations which constantly assail it, and improve the character of its members, by securing the right of minorities in all popular elections; therefore,

Resolved, In order that the wishes of the freemen of the Commonwealth may be duly ascertained in respect to the calling of such a convention, that application be made to the Legislature at its next session, for the passage of a proper act, submitting the question to the people for their decision, at an election to be held for the special purpose, on the 1st Tuesday in May next, or at some other convenient time.

Resolved, That a committee to consist of ten persons, five of whom shall be taken from the body of the League, and five from the Board of Managers of the League, be appointed for the purpose of directing public attention to the subject of the foregoing preamble and resolutions, with authority to confer with any other committees that may be appointed by other organizations or meetings having the same end in view, and with power to take such measures in the premises, as to them may seem meet and expedient.

"J. S. BLAIR, ESQ.— * * With nearly one-half of the Committee against him, actively engaged in circulating mixed and spurious tickets, and two secret organizations working against him, the wonder is that the county ticket was brought safely through the campaign."—Guerrilla Republican.

That's cool for Cremer. Committee men actively engaged in circulating mixed and spurious tickets! That is cool. But Mr. Cremer don't tell the public who printed those tickets and who placed them in the hands of committee men to circulate It wouldn't suit Mr. Cremer's purposes to tell the whole truth about those tickets. We did not intend to make any expose of those "mixed and spurious tickets," but now that Cremer opened the question and tries to throw the blame upon innocent parties, justice demands that the Republican party should know that Cremer printed the tickets and Mr. Blair distributed them to committee men to be voted. Woods and Beaver were to be struck down—crushed.

☞ Butcher's meat in Paris has become so precious that no one person is allowed to buy more than one quarter of a pound per day. We suppose this means a quarter of a pound to each person of the population; and even at this rate the two million of consumers of Paris will eat up from six to seven hundred cattle per day; and Paris has no grass and forage for her cattle, so that they must be nearly used up.—What then? Paris in peace is not a great seaside depot in which provisions of all lands are accumulated for exportation, but is an inland city which lives from day to day on its supplies from the interior. With this siege, therefore, Paris, with all that could be done for them, was poorly provided for the subsistence beyond a month or two of its two millions of consumers. Before many days, therefore, we may look for peace, or desperate sortie by Trochu for the a deliverance of the city.

☞ Since Bedford has fair prospect of a railroad, it bothers its people who shall get its patronage—the Pennsylvania Central or the Baltimore & Ohio.

We see by a Pittsburgh paper that in the Supreme Court, last week, an application was made for a preliminary injunction to restrain the Directors of the Bedford and Bridgeport railroad company from executing a lease of the road to the Pittsburgh and Connellsville railroad company. The complainants are Wood, Morrell & Co., of the Cambria Iron Works, who allege that they have subscribed $150,000 of the stock of the Bedford and Bridgeport railroad. The injunction was granted, to continue five days, when further action will be taken. The main point in the case is whether, under the general act of 1861, a Board of Directors can lease a road without first having their act ratified by a general meeting of the Stockholders.

☞ The sad fate of the Cambria, which we publish elsewhere, is another illustration of the perils of the sea. A ship load of passengers, about one hundred and fifty in number, besides the crew, perished in the waters, and only one escaped to narrate the melancholy disaster.

Summary of War News.

The great news of the week, and one of the most important events of the war, is the capitulation of Marshal Bazaine, and his entire army, at Metz, which occurred on Thursday last. The Prussians took one hundred and fifty thousand prisoners, twenty thousand of whom are sick and wounded. The surrender of Metz is announced by King William to the Queen as follows:

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—The King telegraphs to the Queen to-day:

"This morning Bazaine and Metz capitulated. One hundred and fifty thousand prisoners, including twenty thousand sick and wounded, army and garrison, laid down their arms this afternoon. One of the most important events of the war. Providence be thanked. WILLIAM."

The entire effective French army now left is inside of the fortifications of Paris, and that is so completely surrounded and cut off from supplies, that it too must soon capitulate.

The Prussians announce that the fire will be opened on Paris to-day—October 29th. Paris is said to be girdled with ruins. The country without the walls for miles around is desolate.

There have been a few skirmishes during the past week, but no great battle, and the only important result, that of the surrender of Metz as above stated.

THANKSGIVING.

Proclamation from the Governor.

In continuance of an honored State and National custom, and in devout acknowledgment of human dependence upon Almighty favor, I do hereby appoint Thursday, the twenty-fourth day of November next, as a day of general Thanksgiving and praise, being the same day, and for the same ends and uses, set forth by his excellency, the President of the United States, in his proclamation of the 21st instant.

Pennsylvania, unsurpassed in blessings, should not be surpassed by any in acknowledging her gratitude to God. Let us, then, as citizens of the Commonwealth, abstain, as far as possible, from our usual avocations on that day, and assemble in our respective places of worship, and let us there and in the festivities of our assembled families at our cherished homes, rejoice in the goodness of God, and render thanks to Him for His lovingkindness and His abundant mercy toward us. Let our thanksgiving and our praise find expression in dedicating the day to deeds of benevolence and charity, and in ministering to and alleviating the wants of the poor, the needy and the suffering, so that all may "rejoice and be exceeding glad." "To do good and distribute, forget not; for with such sacrifices God is well pleased."

Let us invoke divine favor upon our beloved State and Nation, and pray that all who are called to administer their governments may be actuated by the "spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and the fear of the Lord."

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State, at Harrisburg, this twenty-eighth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and of the Commonwealth the ninety-fifth.

JOHN W. GEARY.

By the Governor:
F. JORDAN,
Sec'y. of the Commonwealth.

By the President of the United States: A Proclamation.

Whereas, It behooves a people sensible of their dependence on the Almighty, publicly and collectively to acknowledge their gratitude for his favors and mercies, and humbly beseech for their continuance; and

Whereas, The people of the United States, during the year now about to end, have special cause to be thankful for the general prosperity, abundant harvests, exemption from pestilence, foreign war and civic strife; now, therefore, be it known, that I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, concurring in any similar recommendation from chief magistrates of States, do hereby recommend to all citizens to meet in their respective places of worship on Thursday, the 24th day November next, there to give thanks for the bounty of God during the year about to close, and to supplicate for its continuance hereafter.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this 21st day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and of the independence of the United States the ninety-fifth.

U. S GRANT.

By the President,
HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State.

☞ The People's Literary Companion, for November, comes to us as bright and as fresh looking as the green fields after a gentle rain. It is published by E. C. Allen & Co., Augusta, Maine. Terms, 75 cents per year. A fine Steel Engraving, entitled "From Shore to Shore," is presented to every new subscriber. It is really one of the most pleasing engravings ever before the public. The Companion is printed on fine, heavy paper; its columns are filled with good things by talented authors, and withal it is one of the largest and most illustrated family papers published.

☞ The Third Annual Convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of the State of Pennsylvania, will convene at Scranton, on Tuesday, Nov. 8th, 1870. A most hearty Christian welcome is assured to all who come.

☞ We do not care so much for Constitutional Reform as we do for reform in the constitution of bad men who will get into our Legislature in spite of all creation.

The Lost Cambria.

Narrative of the Shipwreck as told by The Surviving Passenger.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Late on Wednesday evening word reached Londonderry, Ireland, that the steamship Cambria, Captain Carnaghan, of the Anchor Line, which left New York on the 8th instant, for Glasgow, had been wrecked off the coast of Donegal. The information was brought to that city by the only survivor, John McGartland, a steerage passenger by the ill-fated vessel. The intelligence was at first disbelieved, notwithstanding the vessel was overdue; but it has since been confirmed by a multitude of telegrams to the agents, the press, and the friends of the passengers.

The telegraph lines throughout Ireland have been sadly disarranged by the recent storms, and the following dispatch summarizing McGartland's narrative, has just gotten through from Londonderry. The voyage from New York was generally fortunate, notwithstanding unpleasant weather prevailed most of the time until the night of Wednesday, October 19, between ten and eleven o'clock. The Cambria was then under sail, and steaming rapidly. Suddenly, when all was apparently going well, she struck on Mistraline Island, a small rocky island ten miles west of Donegal and thirty west of Londonderry. The vessel instantly began to fill thro' large holes stove in her bottom, and fires were soon extinguished. It became evident that the steamer was hopelessly lost, and efforts were therefore directed to save the lives of the passengers, who were massed upon deck. Four boats, crowded with passengers, were launched, and put off from the sinking steamer. McGartland entered one of these, and he saw no more of the ship or other boats.—The weather was very heavy, and he thinks there is no doubt that all the boats were swamped, and that he is the only survivor. Almost instantly upon getting into the boat it capsized, and he lost consciousness. Upon recovering he found himself in the sea, but grasping the gunwale of the boat, which had righted, he succeeded in getting into the boat a second time, and found therein the dead body of a lady dressed in black silk. McGartland was tossed about many hours, when he was picked up by the Enterprise, Capt. Gillespie, who cruised about the scene of the disaster for a long time, in hopes of saving life and property.

McGartland says that almost the very time of the disaster the passengers and crew were congratulating themselves on the tempestuous voyage being nearly finished, and rejoicing in the fact that in one short hour more they would land at Movile. There were certainly one hundred and eighty souls on board, and perhaps more.

Terrible Explosion.

One Man killed and Boy Wounded.—On Thursday evening last as the Broad Top passenger engine "Huntingdon" was having her tanks filled with water at the water station near the "Cut," a short distance from town, the back part of the boiler exploded with a report that was distinctly heard in all parts of our town. A number of persons went to the spot, and found Jeremiah Wertz, a young man employed as engine hostler, lying some distance from the engine, lifeless, with his face and head badly mangled. A boy named Daniel Heck, aged about twelve years, who was climbing up on the tender at the time of the explosion, had his arm and leg broken, and his head and eyes so seriously injured that it is doubtful whether he will recover.

Another boy named Showalter, who was climbing up the bank to get on the tender was knocked down the bank into a stream of muddy water, by the concussion, and escaped injury, but was so badly scared that he ran the whole distance, hatless, to his home, not even stopping to tell persons what had happened.

The engine was precipitated by the concussion down the ten feet embankment, and was considerably demolished, many of the fragments being scattered for some distance around. The track was torn up but little, but many of the boards on the water house were torn off by the force of the explosion, though fortunately no one was in the building at the time.

The correct cause of the explosion is not known, but is believed to be from a defective boiler. Wertz has been employed as hostler for a year or more, and is said to have understood his business, and was a faithful and reliable employee. He leaves a wife and child.

ANOTHER ACCIDENT.—Mr. Joseph Morrison, recently proprietor of the Exchange Hotel, fell off a freight train last evening at the coal wharf above town, and had his right arm cut off above the elbow by the wheels. He is in a precarious situation.

NEWSPAPER SUBSCRIBERS.—The London "Newspaper Press" contains the following classification of newspaper subscribers, which is somewhat vaguely credited to "an American paper:"

First comes the UPRIGHTS.—These are men who take newspapers, pay for them, and read them. Observe the order in which these things are done: The pay comes first—the reading next. These men consider they get the worth of their money in the bargain. It seems as fair and just to them that the newspapers should be paid for as a barrel of sugar new coat. They never entertain any other opinion. When the year runs out, or little before, they are on hand with the pay. There is no more difficulty with them in remembering this period, than Sunday or the first of January. If one of them wishes to stop his paper, he either calls or writes a letter by his postmaster, in due season, like a man. This class is dear to the heart of the editor. Their image is embalmed in his warm affections.—May they live to a thousand years, and see their son's sons to the fourth generation.

The second class now in mind is the

DO WELLS.—This class is nearly related to the other—so near, that it is hard to tell where the one begins and the other ends. These men always pay in advance in the beginning, and intend to do so continually. But memory fails a little, or some mishap intervenes, and the time runs by—sometimes a little—sometimes for quite a period. But their recollection, tho' nodding occasionally, never gets sound asleep. It pronounces the word in due time—"The printer is not paid;" and forthwith their will to do well kindles into activity. Now comes the pay up—"Meant to do so before.—Don't mean to let such things pass by." A publisher can live with such men. They have a warm place in his memory—only a little back of the Uprights. If such a man dies in arrears, his wife or son remembers that he may not have paid up for his newspaper, and forthwith institutes inquiries.—They remember that part of the benefit was theirs, and, estate or no estate, see that the printer's bills are not among their father's unsettled accounts.

Next comes the EASY DOERS.—These men believe in newspapers. They have fully settled it in their own minds that a newspaper is a good thing. They take them, too. Sometimes at the first they pay up for the first year—at any rate they mean to, pretty soon. If they have done so, they sit down with the comforting conviction that their newspaper is now settled for; and this idea having once got into their heads, refuses obstinately to be dislodged, but keeps its hold from year to year; a truth once—but now an illusion, gray and rheumatic with years. The editor, marking the elongated and elongating space in the accounts current of their dollars, begins to ask if they are dead or have gone to California. Now he begins to poke bills at them. They suddenly start up to the reality that they are in arrears; and, like men, as they are at the bottom, pay up. They never dispute his bills—they know books tell better stories than moss covered memories. If the publisher has faith enough, or a long purse, and can live like a hibernating bear, he may survive this class. But if he is mortal only, woe be to him.

The next class is that of the

DOWN HILLERS.—Here we begin to slide over to the other side. The picture suddenly gets sombre. We shall dispatch the Down Hillers suddenly. One of these may take a paper because his wife wants one, or the children are zealous to read it, or a neighbor persuades him. When it begins to come, he dismisses all thoughts about it further. If the editor sends a man directly to him at the end of two or three years, he may get some pay for his paper, but with growls and surly looks. He never pays any debt if he can get rid of it, and a newspaper least of all. Still, he hates lawsuits, and constables, and all that. A dun has the same effect on him that a bullet has on a hippopotamus—glancing from his hide or sinking into the blubber harmless. He is always sliding down hill, and soon merges into another class, that of

THE NIX CUM ROUSE.—No matter how this man began his subscription, he never pays for it—not he. "He don't like that sort of paper. It don't give no news. He never did like it.—He didn't want it in the first place, and told the postmaster so. He sent back one more than a year ago—besides, he never began to take it till a long time after it came, and he hadn't had only two or three of them, at any rate, and those he hadn't read." Wipe him off.

Here comes the SCAPEGRACE.—It is enough to say of him that he never fails to have a newspaper—two or three of them. When he thinks they have come about long enough for the publisher to want pay, he sends back with "stop it." Or he takes up his quarters and leaves for parts unknown. He does not want to pay, and don't mean to. Get it if you can.

Reader, in which of the above classes are you found?

Robbery.

Blairs' book store in this place, in which the Post Office is located, was entered by robbers on Wednesday night last, and robbed of about $500 in goods and money. The thieves effected an entrance by breaking open the transom above the back door, in front of which were two bars. The safe, which was an old style Evans & Watson's was blown open, and the contents, consisting of about twenty dollars in money and about $200 worth of postage stamps, were stolen, together with several watches, satchels and a lot of pocket knives, in all amounting to about $500. A woman, living above the store room, heard the report of the explosion, but as she was alone and defenceless, she could do nothing to prevent the robbery. Efforts were made to apprehend the thieves by telegraph, but they got off the train at Harrisburg before the dispatch was received

Another Attempt.—We learn that on the same night the thieves tried the door of the Union Bank, and had succeeded in opening it with nippers, when the clerk James Long was awakened by the noise, and jumped up and turned on the gas suddenly, which scared them off.

☞ When the Princess Mathilda was arrested with her fifty-two trunks, a great crowd of men and boys and stern policemen gathered around the unhappy woman to know what she was carrying away; she was not excited, but with her hands raised heavenward was murmuring, "Give us this day our daily bread." By this time the right key was thrust into the lock and up went the lid, and what do you suppose it contained. Reader, neither gold nor diamonds; the little woman had just been across the Channel visiting Uncle Sam, stopped in Huntingdon, and found her way to the establishment of Mr. Luke Reilly, where she succeeded in stowing away such a great quantity of his bread and cakes that it led to her arrest.

So, ladies who wish to indulge in a treat;

THANKS.—Mr. John Rhodes, of Henderson township, has our thanks for a basketfull of the largest and nicest potatoes we have seen or eaten for a long time. Four of them would fill a half-peck measure. We are sure Mr. R. will have no trouble in disposing of his potatoes at the highest price.

BAZAAR OF FASHION.—Particular attention paid to Dress and Cloak making and all kinds of sewing. Also a full line of Millinery goods, and Paper Patterns, constantly on hand. Goffering, Fluting and Pinking done in all their various branches. Skirts, sacques and children's clothing stamped in all styles, and at low prices, at Mrs. L. A. Hamer's, corner of Mifflin and Bath streets. Oct. 18-1y.

A strolling dentist emptied the mouths of 20c of the good people of Philipsburg recently by promising to insert false teeth at $10 a set, $2 cash down when the teeth were extracted and the balance on completing the contract. He gathered up $400 and cleared out. We don't see how the unfortunates could swear very intelligibly about it.

AGENTS Wanted for SATAN IN SOCIETY

A NEW BOOK of the greatest interest and importance Written from a high moral and physiological standpoint by an eminent physician and medical professor, it shows how Satan is working out his subtle and dangerous designs through our most sacred domestic and social plantations. Pure-minded, but outspoken and aggressive, the author handles the delicate subjects treated of without gloves, but in such a manner as not to minister to a prurient curiosity. The Physical Regeneration of the Race, is a subject justly enlisting the interest and sympathy of all true philanthropists, and this book, it is believed, will contribute to that end just in proportion as it has readers. ROSADALIS

THE Great American Health Restorer, purifies the blood and cures Scrofula, Syphilis, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Diseases of Women and all Chronic Affections of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys. Recommended by the Medical Faculty and thousand of our best citizens.

Read the testimony of Physicians and patients who have used Rosadalis send for our Rosadalis Guide to Health or Almanac for this year, which we publish for gratuitous distribution; it will give you much valuable information.

Dr. R. W. Carr, of Baltimore says:

I take pleasure in recommending your Rosadalis as a very powerful alterative. I have seen it used in two cases with happy results—one in case of secondary syphilis, in which the patient pronounced himself cured after having taken five bottles of your medicine. The other is a case of scrofula of long standing, which is rapidly improving under its use, and the indications are that the patient will soon recover. I have carefully examined the formula by which your Rosadalis is made, and find it an excellent compound of all alterative ingredients.

Dr. Sparks, of Nicholasville, Ky., says he has used Rosadalis in cases of scrofula and secondary Syphilis with satisfactory results—as a cleaner of the blood I know no better remedy.

Samuel G. McFadden, Murfreesboro' Tennessee, says:

I have used seven bottles of Rosadalis, and am entirely cured of Rheumatism; send me four bottles, as I wish it for my brother, who has scrofulous sore eyes.

Benjamin Bechtol, of Lima, Ohio, writes, I have suffered for twenty years with an inveterate eruption over my body; a short time since I purchased a bottle of Rosadalis and it effected a perfect cure.

Rosadalis is sold by John Read and S. S. Smith, Huntingdon, Pa., and Druggists generally.

WHAT I KNOW OF FARMING.

BY HORACE GREELEY.

XXXV.

ACCOUNTS IN FARMING.

Farmers, it is urged, sometimes fail; and this is unfortunately true of them, as of all others. Some fail in integrity; others in sobriety; many in capacity; most in diligence; but not a few in method or system. Quite a number fail because they undertake too much at the outset: that is, they run into debt for more land than they have capital to stock or means to fertilize, and are forced into bankruptcy by the interest ever-accruing upon land which they are unable to cultivate. If they should get ahead a little by active exertion throughout the day, the interest would overtake and pass them during the ensuing night.

Few of the unsuccessful realize the extent to which their ill-fortune is fairly attributable to their own waste of time. Men not naturally lazy squander hours weekly in the village or at the railroad station, without a suspicion that they are thus destroying their chances of success in life. To-day is given up to a monkey-show; half of to-morrow is lost in attendance on an auction; part of next day is spent at a caucus or a jury trial; and so on until one-third of the year is virtually wasted.

Now, the men who have achieved eminent success, within my observation, have all been rigid economists of time. They managed to transact their business at the county-seat while serving there as grand or petit jurors, or detained under subpœna as witnesses; they never attended an auction unless they really needed something which was there to be sold, and then they began their day's work earlier and ended it later in order to redeem the time which they borrowed for the sale. I do not believe that any American farmer who could count up three hundred full days' work in every year between his twenty-first and his thirtieth over yet failed, except as a result of speculation, or endorsing, or inordinate running into debt.

I would, therefore, urge every farmer to keep a rigid account current of the disposal of his time, so as to be able to see at the year's end exactly how many days thereof he had given to productive labor; how many to such abiding improvements as fencing and draining; and how many to objects which neither increased his crop nor improved his farm. I am sure many would be amazed at the extent of this last category.

If every youth who expects to live by farming would buy a cheap pocket-book wallet which contains a diary wherein a page is allotted to each day of the year, and would, at the close of the day, or at least while its incidents were still fresh in his mind, set down under its proper head whatever incidents were most noteworthy—as, for instance, a soaking rain; a light or heavy shower; a slight or killing frost; a fall of snow; a hurricane; a hailstorm; a gale; a hot or notably cold temperature; the turning out of cattle to pasture or sheltering them against the severity of Winter; also the planting or sowing of each crop or field, and whether harm was done to it by frost in its infancy or when it approached maturity—he would thus provide himself with annual volumes of fact which would prove instructive and valuable throughout his maturer years.

The good farmer will of course keep accounts with such of his neighbors as he sees fit to deal with; and he ought to charge a lent or credit a borrowed plow, borrow, reaper, log-chain, or other implement, precisely as though it were meal or meat of an equal value. I judge that harrowed implements, if regularly charged at cost, and credited at actual value when returned, would generally come home sooner and in better condition.

But the farmer, like every one else, should be most careful to keep debt and credit with himself and his farm. If a dollar is spent or lent, his books should show it, and let items and sum total stare him in the face when he strikes a balance at the close of the year. If there has been no leakage either of dimes or of hours, he will seldom be poorer on the 31st of December than he was on the 1st of the preceding January.

Most farmers fail to keep accounts with their several fields and crops; yet what could be more instructive than these? Here are ten acres of Corn, with a yield of 20 to 40 bushels per acre — a like area and like yield of Oats, a smaller or larger of Rye, Buckwheat, and Beans, as the case may be. If the produce is sold, most farmers know how much it brings; but how many know how it cost? Say the Corn brings 75 cents per bushel, and the Oats 50 cents; was either or both produced at a profit? If so, at what profit? Here is a farmer who has grown from 1000 to 300 bushels of corn per annum for the last 20 years; ought he not to know by this time what Corn costs him in the average, and whether it could or could not with profit give place to somthing else? Most farmers grow some crops at a profit, others at a loss; ought they not to know, after an experience of five to ten years, what crops have put money into their pockets, and what have made them poorer for the growing?

Of course, there is complication and some degree of uncertainty in all such account-keeping; for every one is aware that some crops take more from the soil than others, and so leave it in a worse condition for those that are to follow, and that some exact large reenforcements of fertilizers, whereof a part only is fairly chargeable to the first ensuing product, while a large share inures to the subsequent harvests. Each must judge for himself how much is to be credited for such improvement, and how much charged against other crop for deterioration.—He, for example, whose meadows will cut from two to three tons per acre of good English Hay may generally sell that Hay for twice it not thrice the immediate cost of its production, and so seem to be realizing a large profit; but, if he gives nothing to the soil in return for the heavy draft thus made upon it, his crop will dwindle year by year, until it will hardly pay for cutting; and the diminution in value of his meadows will nearly or quite balance the seeming profit accruing from his Hay. But account-keeping in every business involves essentially identical calculations, and the merchant who this year makes no net profit on his goods, but doubles the number of his customers and the extent of his trade, has thriven precisely as has the farmer whose profit on his crops has all been invested in drains permeating his bogs, and in Lime, Plaster, and other fertilizers, applied to and permanently enriching his dryer fields.

"To make each day a critic on the last" was the aspiration of a wise man, if not a great poet. So the farmer who will keep careful and candid accounts with himself, annually correcting his estimates by the light of experience, will soon learn what crops he may reasonably expect to grow at a profit, and to reject such as are likely to involve him in loss; and he who, having done this, shall blend common sense with industry, will have no reason to complain thereafter that there is no profit in farming.

ADDRESS

TO THE

NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED.

WHOSE SUFFERINGS HAVE BEEN PROTRACTED FROM HIDDEN CAUSES, AND WHOSE CASES REQUIRE

PROMPT TREATMENT.

TO RENDER EXISTENCE DESIRABLE

If you are suffering, or have suffered, from involuntary discharges, what effect does it produce upon your general health? Do you feel weak, debilitated, easily tired? Does a little extra exertion produce palpitation of the heart? Does your liver, or urine organs, or your kidneys, get out of order? Is your urine sometimes thick, milky or flocky, or is it ropy on settling? Or does a thick skum rise to the top? Or is a sediment at the bottom after it has stood awhile? Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspepsia? Are your bowels constipated? Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head? Is your memory impaired? Is your mind constantly dwelling on this subject? Do you feel dull, listless, moping, tired of company, of life? Do you wish to be left alone, to get away from everybody? Does any little thing make you start or jump? Is your sleep broken or restless? Is the lustre of your eye as bright? Do you enjoy yourself in society as well? Do you pursue your business with the same energy? Do you feel as much confidence in yourself? Are your spirits dull and flagging, given to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia. Have you rest less nights? Your back weak, your knees weak, and have but little appetite, and you attribute this to dyspepsia or liver complaint?

Now, reader, self-abuse, venereal diseases badly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs. The organs of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think that those bold, defiant, energetic, persevering, successful business men are always those whose organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melancholy, of nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become sad and discouraged, they are always polite and pleasant in company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—none of your downcast looks or any other meanness about them. I do not mean those who keep the organs inflated by running to excess. Those will not only ruin their constitution, but those they do business with or for.

How many men, from badly cured diseases, from the effects of self abuse and excesses, have brought about that state of weakness in these organs that has reduced the general system so much as to induce almost every other disease—idiocy, lunacy, paralysis, spinal affections, suicide, and almost every form of disease humanity is heir to—and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever suspected, and have doctored for all but the right one.

DISEASES OF THESE ORGANS REQUIRE THE USE OF A

COUGHS, SORE THROAT, ETC

No medicine or treatment can excel the powerful curative power of

DR. SIMMS'

WHITE PULMONIC BALSAM.

It cures with a rapidity unequalled by any other remedy offered for throat and lung diseases. It is recommended by over 2,000 persons in Wilmington, and hundreds in Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities and communities throughout the country. Mr. Pennington, of Wilmington, Illinois, writes that there is not (with a few exceptions) a family in that city who will be without it if possible to procure it. Such is its popularity wherever it is known—and this popularity arises from the fact that it universally cures all who use it. There is no case of

COUGHS, COLDS, SORE THROAT, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, CROUP,

BLOOD SPITTING, HOARSENESS, and even Pulmonary Consumption, where the system is not broken down with the wear of the disease, or pretended medicine, or inexperienced advice, that this Balsam will not cure if carefully used according to directions. We guarantee it all we represent it be, and invite a trial from the afflicted everywhere. Price 50 cts., medium size, and $1 for large size bottles. Prepared only by
